

From: Dwight Sledge
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 12/6/01 2:58pm
Subject: Microsoft wins again

Great move folks! Punish an anti-trust offender by allowing them to expand their stranglehold on the pc market by filling up the poorer school districts with their software products. Yes, the very same products they used to force vendors to use their products.

How about making them spend their ill gotten gains to provide hardware that they do not make, or, make them provide the school districts with the amount of cash required to provide this hardware and software? The school districts would then be free to choose how to spend that money, the only stipulation being they must use the money for computers and software.

Regards,

Dwight Sledge